Dr. Marshall Fagin
Prosthodontist

Q: I have advanced periodontal disease. Are complete dentures my best choice?

A: For 35 years I have created predictable treatment plans with full mouth rehabilitation, saving teeth others have doomed. Proper finessing and stabilizing of your Occlusion (bite), can also significantly affect outcomes. As a Prosthodontist with a strong periodontal and occlusal background, working as a team with periodontists, we now also incorporate dental implants into treatment planning, rather than playing super-hero to questionable teeth. Sometimes dental implants are a more predictable option that can support and retain both fixed bridges that stay in the mouth or removable over-dentures that come out to clean. It's about recognizing and integrating multiple details that make such a great difference in outcomes. So when making a large investment in something as important as your teeth, we encourage patients to seek a second opinion from a Prosthodontist. Call Fagin & Associates - Prosthodontists today, for your comprehensive exam and consultation.
